A critical part of any professionals' career is ensuring that they keep abreast of new technology. This is the founding philosophy behind mandatory CPD requirements for registered professionals. Are you abreast of new tools and techniques available to you?

The EAGCG has run several 'new technology' themed workshops in the past. The topic has always been one of our more popular. These workshops have always provided our Members with a wealth of knowledge and ideas. The next workshop will do just the same.

A feature of the next workshop will be that it will also be tailored toward the current state of our mining industry. It's now very rare to find budgets similar to what we experienced 5 years ago. Limited budgets force efficiencies.

However, we still face the same and evolving challenges. The workshop will focus on cost effective solutions to addressing some of them. Whether they be efficiencies made possible through better definition of the mechanisms involved or providing alternative tools to the Geotechnical Engineer's requirements – both are instrumental in ensuring that your daily activities and your projects remain as successful as possible.

We have an excellent programme of speakers planned. However, we can always fit more in. If you have a project or ideas you'd like to share with the other Members, or if your company is keen to be one of the Sponsors, contact our Secretary for details on how you can get involved.
